18 bài mẫu IELTS Writing Task 2 — Crime & Law

Từ và cụm quan trọng được tô màu; cuối mỗi bài là các cụm cần nhớ kèm nghĩa. Điểm do AI chấm, chỉ để tham khảo.

Cụm từ | Từ đồng nghĩa | Từ nối | Khung câu | Câu mang ý | Câu ví dụ

Causes / Solutions

#49 Causes / Solutions · 282 từ · AI 7.0

What are the causes of crime in large cities? What solutions can be proposed?

Large cities offer opportunities and excitement, but many of them also suffer from high levels of theft, violence and drug-related crime. This essay will analyse the principal causes and propose realistic solutions.

Crime in large cities is driven by inequality, unemployment and weak social ties. Where some people see wealth around them but have no job or prospects, and where neighbours do not know one another, gangs, drugs and theft become more attractive and harder to detect. A teenager who leaves school with no qualifications and no job, for example, may be drawn by a gang that offers money and belonging. In addition, crowded housing, poor schools and the easy availability of drugs and alcohol increase the risk, and the anonymity of city life makes offenders feel safe from being recognised. Families may also be under strain, leaving young people with little guidance. As a result, crime tends to concentrate in a few deprived districts.

To address this issue, governments should tackle the causes of crime as well as punish offenders. Jobs, education and youth programmes give people a stake in society, better lighting and street design make public places safer, and treatment for addiction reduces the crimes that feed it. In addition, community policing, in which officers get to know the residents they serve, helps to build trust and gives early warning of problems. Faster and fairer courts, together with support for former prisoners to find work, reduce reoffending. These measures cost less than building more prisons, and the improvement lasts longer.

In conclusion, crime in large cities stems mainly from inequality, unemployment and weak community ties, but investment in opportunity, safer design and community policing offers a realistic way forward.

Cụm cần nhớ

- theft, violence and drug-related crime — trộm cắp, bạo lực và tội phạm liên quan ma tuý
- analyse the principal causes — phân tích các nguyên nhân chính
- driven by inequality, unemployment and weak social ties — bị thúc đẩy bởi bất bình đẳng, thất nghiệp và quan hệ xã hội lỏng lẻo
- no job or prospects — không có việc làm hay triển vọng
- neighbours do not know one another — hàng xóm không biết nhau
- gangs, drugs and theft become more attractive — băng nhóm, ma tuý và trộm cắp trở nên hấp dẫn hơn
- harder to detect — khó phát hiện hơn
- leaves school with no qualifications — rời trường không có bằng cấp
- a gang that offers money and belonging — băng nhóm cho tiền và cảm giác thuộc về
- crowded housing — nhà ở chật chội
- easy availability of drugs and alcohol — dễ có ma tuý và rượu
- the anonymity of city life — sự ẩn danh của cuộc sống thành phố
- feel safe from being recognised — cảm thấy an toàn không bị nhận ra
- under strain — chịu áp lực
- concentrate in a few deprived districts — tập trung ở vài khu nghèo
- a stake in society — một phần lợi ích trong xã hội
- better lighting and street design — chiếu sáng và thiết kế phố tốt hơn
- treatment for addiction — điều trị nghiện
- community policing — cảnh sát cộng đồng
- reduce reoffending — giảm tái phạm
- stems mainly from — chủ yếu bắt nguồn từ

Extent

#90 Extent · 283 từ · AI 7.5

Some argue that stricter gun control reduces crime. To what extent do you agree?

In several countries, serious crimes involving firearms regularly make the news, and some argue that stricter gun control reduces crime. I largely agree, since fewer guns make violence less deadly, although gun control alone cannot remove crime.

To begin with, stricter gun control makes violent crime less deadly. Fewer guns in circulation and checks on buyers make it harder for dangerous people to obtain weapons and reduce deaths in arguments and accidents. An argument between neighbours, for example, is far less likely to end in a death if neither has easy access to a gun. Countries with strict licensing, background checks and limits on ownership, such as Japan and the United Kingdom, tend to have far fewer gun deaths than countries where guns are widely available. Gun control also reduces suicides and accidental shootings, which make up a large share of firearm deaths.

Furthermore, controls make it harder for criminals to arm themselves, since many illegal guns begin as legal ones that were stolen or sold carelessly. However, gun control has limits. Determined criminals can still find illegal guns, particularly where borders are open and black markets are well established, and strict laws are of little use if they are not enforced. Crime also has other causes, such as poverty, drugs and gangs, which require different solutions. Gun laws should therefore be accompanied by tracing of weapons, penalties for illegal sales, and programmes that tackle gangs and unemployment. Public support for the laws and clear rules for lawful owners, such as hunters, also make them easier to apply.

In conclusion, stricter gun control reduces crime and deaths to a large extent, but it works best as part of a wider strategy against violence.

Cụm cần nhớ

- serious crimes involving firearms — tội phạm nghiêm trọng liên quan súng
- stricter gun control — kiểm soát súng nghiêm ngặt hơn
- make violence less deadly — làm bạo lực ít chết người hơn
- Fewer guns in circulation — ít súng lưu hành hơn
- checks on buyers — kiểm tra người mua
- obtain weapons — có được vũ khí
- deaths in arguments and accidents — tử vong trong tranh cãi và tai nạn
- easy access to a gun — dễ tiếp cận súng
- strict licensing, background checks and limits on ownership — cấp phép nghiêm, kiểm tra lý lịch và giới hạn sở hữu
- far fewer gun deaths — ít tử vong do súng hơn hẳn
- widely available — sẵn có rộng rãi
- suicides and accidental shootings — tự tử và bắn nhầm
- arm themselves — tự trang bị vũ khí
- illegal guns — súng bất hợp pháp
- stolen or sold carelessly — bị trộm hoặc bán cẩu thả
- has limits — có giới hạn
- Determined criminals — tội phạm quyết tâm
- black markets are well established — chợ đen đã ăn sâu
- not enforced — không được thực thi
- tracing of weapons — truy vết vũ khí
- to a large extent — ở mức độ lớn
- part of a wider strategy — một phần của chiến lược rộng hơn

#130 Extent · 288 từ · AI 8.0

Some argue that harsher penalties reduce crime. To what extent do you agree?

Politicians often respond to rising crime by promising longer sentences, and some argue that harsher penalties reduce crime. I agree only to a limited extent, since the certainty of being caught deters more than the severity of the sentence, although serious offenders must be kept from harming others.

To begin with, the certainty of being caught deters crime more than the severity of the sentence. Offenders rarely expect to be caught, so longer sentences have little effect on their decisions. A thief who believes that he will probably not be caught, for example, is hardly influenced by whether the maximum sentence is five or ten years. Many crimes are committed on impulse, under the influence of drugs or alcohol, or in anger, when people do not think about penalties at all. Studies in several countries suggest that visible policing and a high chance of arrest do more to prevent crime than heavier punishment.

Furthermore, harsh penalties have costs. Prisons are expensive, overcrowded and often teach new crimes to those who enter them, so released prisoners may commit more offences, and long sentences leave families without support. However, penalties are not meaningless. Serious and violent offenders need long sentences to protect the public, and clear punishments express society's disapproval and give justice to victims. The strongest approach combines a high chance of detection, swift and fair trials, proportionate sentences and rehabilitation, such as education and job training in prison. This reduces reoffending more effectively than severity alone. Resources spent on police and courts are therefore often better value than extra years in prison.

In conclusion, harsher penalties reduce crime only to a limited extent, because deterrence depends more on certainty than severity, though serious crimes still require firm punishment.

Cụm cần nhớ

- rising crime — tội phạm gia tăng
- longer sentences — án dài hơn
- harsher penalties reduce crime — hình phạt nặng hơn giảm tội phạm
- to a limited extent — ở mức độ hạn chế
- the certainty of being caught — sự chắc chắn bị bắt
- the severity of the sentence — mức độ nghiêm khắc của bản án
- deters crime — răn đe tội phạm
- rarely expect to be caught — hiếm khi nghĩ mình bị bắt
- on impulse — bốc đồng
- under the influence of drugs or alcohol — dưới ảnh hưởng của ma tuý hoặc rượu
- visible policing — công tác cảnh sát nhìn thấy được
- a high chance of arrest — khả năng bị bắt cao
- overcrowded — quá tải
- teach new crimes — dạy tội phạm mới
- leave families without support — để gia đình không có chỗ dựa
- express society's disapproval — thể hiện sự phản đối của xã hội
- give justice to victims — mang công lý cho nạn nhân
- swift and fair trials — xét xử nhanh và công bằng
- proportionate sentences and rehabilitation — án tương xứng và phục hồi

#312 Extent · 279 từ · AI 7.5

Some argue that stricter traffic laws reduce accidents. To what extent do you agree?

Every year, traffic accidents kill and injure millions of people, and some argue that stricter traffic laws reduce accidents. I largely agree, since rules on speed, seat belts and drink-driving save lives when they are enforced, although laws alone cannot solve the problem.

To begin with, stricter traffic laws save lives when they are enforced. Speed limits, seat-belt rules and drink-driving laws, backed by cameras and checks, change how people drive. A stretch of road with speed cameras, for example, often sees far fewer serious crashes because drivers slow down. Many countries that introduced compulsory seat belts, lower alcohol limits and penalty points have recorded large falls in deaths, even while the number of vehicles increased. Strict rules also send a clear message about what is acceptable, and the fear of losing a licence encourages caution. Mobile phone bans can further reduce distraction at the wheel.

Furthermore, laws give police the power to remove dangerous drivers from the road. However, laws alone are not enough. Road design, vehicle safety, driver education and road maintenance also have a large effect on accidents, and rules that are not enforced are easily ignored. Where police are few or corruption is common, drivers soon learn that the law has no teeth. Accidents are also caused by tiredness, poor visibility and bad weather, which laws cannot change directly. Governments should therefore combine strict laws with safer roads, better public transport, driver training and regular vehicle checks. A crossing with lights and barriers, for instance, protects pedestrians whatever the law says.

In conclusion, stricter traffic laws reduce accidents to a large extent, provided that they are enforced and supported by safe roads and good education.

Cụm cần nhớ

- traffic accidents kill and injure millions of people — tai nạn giao thông giết và làm bị thương hàng triệu người
- stricter traffic laws — luật giao thông nghiêm hơn
- speed, seat belts and drink-driving — tốc độ, dây an toàn và lái xe sau uống rượu
- save lives when they are enforced — cứu mạng khi được thực thi
- backed by cameras and checks — được hỗ trợ bởi camera và kiểm tra
- change how people drive — thay đổi cách người ta lái xe
- speed cameras — camera tốc độ
- far fewer serious crashes — ít tai nạn nghiêm trọng hơn hẳn
- compulsory seat belts — dây an toàn bắt buộc
- lower alcohol limits and penalty points — giới hạn nồng độ cồn thấp hơn và điểm phạt
- large falls in deaths — tử vong giảm mạnh
- a clear message about what is acceptable — thông điệp rõ về điều có thể chấp nhận
- the fear of losing a licence — nỗi sợ mất bằng lái
- distraction at the wheel — xao nhãng khi lái xe
- remove dangerous drivers from the road — loại tài xế nguy hiểm khỏi đường
- Road design, vehicle safety, driver education — thiết kế đường, an toàn xe, giáo dục lái xe
- not enforced — không được thực thi
- easily ignored — dễ bị phớt lờ
- the law has no teeth — luật không có răng
- tiredness, poor visibility and bad weather — mệt mỏi, tầm nhìn kém và thời tiết xấu
- public transport — giao thông công cộng
- to a large extent — ở mức độ lớn
- safe roads and good education — đường an toàn và giáo dục tốt

#412 Extent · 276 từ · AI 7.5

Some argue that community policing builds trust. To what extent do you agree?

Police work depends heavily on cooperation from the public, and some argue that community policing builds trust. I largely agree, since regular contact between officers and residents encourages cooperation, although trust also depends on how fairly and respectfully the police behave.

To begin with, community policing builds trust between officers and residents. Officers who walk the same streets, meet shopkeepers and talk to young people learn about local problems early, and residents who trust them are more willing to share information. An officer who walks the same neighbourhood every day, for example, may learn about a bullying problem from a shopkeeper before it becomes serious. When people see the police as familiar neighbours who listen rather than as strangers who arrive only after a crime, they feel respected and are more willing to report offences and act as witnesses. Over time, this builds a relationship of mutual respect that is valuable in emergencies.

Furthermore, community policing can improve relations with groups that have been suspicious of the police, such as young people and ethnic minorities. Regular meetings, open days and joint projects such as sports events give both sides a chance to understand each other. However, contact alone does not guarantee trust. Trust also depends on how fairly and respectfully officers behave. If residents experience rudeness, discrimination or abuse, friendly events will not repair the damage, and officers who are moved too often cannot form relationships. Police forces should therefore combine community engagement with accountability, training and honest handling of complaints.

In conclusion, community policing builds trust to a large extent by creating regular, friendly contact, provided that it is accompanied by fair and respectful behaviour.

Cụm cần nhớ

- cooperation from the public — sự hợp tác của công chúng
- community policing — cảnh sát cộng đồng
- builds trust — xây dựng niềm tin
- regular contact between officers and residents — tiếp xúc thường xuyên giữa sĩ quan và cư dân
- encourages cooperation — khuyến khích hợp tác
- how fairly and respectfully the police behave — cách cảnh sát cư xử công bằng và tôn trọng
- builds trust between officers and residents — xây dựng niềm tin giữa sĩ quan và cư dân
- walk the same streets — đi bộ cùng các con phố
- meet shopkeepers — gặp chủ cửa hàng
- learn about local problems early — biết vấn đề địa phương sớm
- willing to share information — sẵn lòng chia sẻ thông tin
- a bullying problem — vấn đề bắt nạt
- familiar neighbours who listen — những người hàng xóm quen thuộc biết lắng nghe
- strangers who arrive only after a crime — người lạ chỉ đến sau khi có tội phạm
- feel respected — cảm thấy được tôn trọng
- act as witnesses — làm nhân chứng
- mutual respect — tôn trọng lẫn nhau
- valuable in emergencies — có giá trị trong tình huống khẩn cấp
- groups that have been suspicious of the police — các nhóm từng nghi ngờ cảnh sát
- ethnic minorities — dân tộc thiểu số
- open days and joint projects — ngày mở cửa và dự án chung
- contact alone does not guarantee trust — chỉ tiếp xúc không đảm bảo niềm tin
- respectfully — một cách tôn trọng
- rudeness, discrimination or abuse — thô lỗ, phân biệt đối xử hay lạm dụng
- repair the damage — sửa chữa thiệt hại
- moved too often — bị điều chuyển quá thường xuyên
- accountability, training and honest handling of complaints — trách nhiệm giải trình, đào tạo và xử lý khiếu nại trung thực
- to a large extent — ở mức độ lớn

- regular, friendly contact — tiếp xúc thường xuyên, thân thiện

Discuss both views

#91 Discuss both views · 283 từ · AI 7.0

Is it better to focus government spending on policing or on social services? Discuss and give your opinion.

Opinions are divided as to whether public money should be spent mainly on policing or on social services. This essay will consider both perspectives before explaining my own opinion.

On the one hand, supporters of policing argue that police respond to crime at once. Officers deter offenders, protect victims and catch criminals, and the presence of patrols makes residents feel safe enough to go out, shop and invest in their neighbourhood. A town with regular patrols, for example, tends to experience fewer break-ins and less vandalism, and a quick response can save lives when violence occurs. Residents who feel secure are more likely to work, trade and send their children to school, so safety is the foundation of everyday life. Police also deal with emergencies that no other service can handle, from road accidents to terrorism.

On the other hand, supporters of social services point out that they help to prevent crime by dealing with its causes. Jobs, mental health care, housing support and youth services reduce the pressures that lead people to crime in the first place, and they cost far less than arrests, trials and prison sentences. A young person who is helped into training, for instance, is less likely to join a gang and may become a taxpayer instead of an offender. Social services also help victims and reduce reoffending, so their effect lasts longer than short-term deterrence. However, their results take years to appear, and the public often demands visible action.

In conclusion, both views have merit. Overall, I believe that a balanced budget gives the best results, with enough police to ensure immediate safety and a growing share for social services that prevent crime in the long term.

Cụm cần nhớ

- public money — tiền công
- policing — công tác cảnh sát
- social services — dịch vụ xã hội
- supporters of policing — người ủng hộ công tác cảnh sát
- respond to crime at once — phản ứng với tội phạm ngay lập tức
- deter offenders, protect victims — răn đe kẻ phạm tội, bảo vệ nạn nhân
- the presence of patrols — sự hiện diện của tuần tra
- feel safe enough to go out — cảm thấy đủ an toàn để ra ngoài
- regular patrols — tuần tra thường xuyên
- fewer break-ins and less vandalism — ít đột nhập và phá hoại hơn
- a quick response can save lives — phản ứng nhanh có thể cứu mạng
- the foundation of everyday life — nền tảng của đời sống hằng ngày
- deal with emergencies — xử lý tình huống khẩn cấp
- help to prevent crime — giúp ngăn tội phạm
- dealing with its causes — giải quyết nguyên nhân của nó
- Jobs, mental health care, housing support and youth services — việc làm, chăm sóc tâm thần, hỗ trợ nhà ở và dịch vụ thanh niên
- arrests, trials and prison sentences — bắt giữ, xét xử và án tù
- join a gang — gia nhập băng nhóm
- reduce reoffending — giảm tái phạm
- visible action — hành động nhìn thấy được
- a balanced budget — ngân sách cân bằng

#272 Discuss both views · 282 từ · AI 8.0

Should individuals be responsible for preventing identity theft, or should society/government take action? Discuss.

Millions of people have had their names, bank details or passwords stolen and used by criminals, and opinions differ on who should be responsible for preventing identity theft. This essay will consider both perspectives before explaining my own opinion.

On the one hand, supporters of personal responsibility argue that individuals can do a great deal to protect themselves. People can use strong and different passwords, avoid clicking on suspicious links, check their bank statements regularly and shred documents that contain personal details. A person who receives an email that appears to come from the bank, for example, may give away passwords unless he or she has been warned about such tricks. Careful behaviour online, such as limiting the information shared on social media, makes it harder for criminals to impersonate someone. Since criminals rely on carelessness, a cautious public is the first line of defence.

On the other hand, advocates of action by society and government point out that individuals cannot protect data they do not control. Banks, retailers and online services store enormous amounts of information, and a single hack can expose millions of customers. Only these organisations can secure their systems, and only governments can pass laws that require companies to protect data, punish offenders and cooperate across borders to catch them. Police need specialist skills and international agreements to trace criminals who operate from other countries. Victims, meanwhile, often spend months repairing their records, and they need legal support and quick routes to restore their identity.

In conclusion, both views have merit. Overall, I believe that the most effective approach combines official leadership with personal action, since institutions must secure data and punish criminals while individuals take sensible precautions.

Cụm cần nhớ

- had their names, bank details or passwords stolen — bị trộm tên, thông tin ngân hàng hoặc mật khẩu
- responsible — có trách nhiệm
- preventing identity theft — ngăn trộm danh tính
- supporters of personal responsibility — người ủng hộ trách nhiệm cá nhân
- protect themselves — tự bảo vệ mình
- strong and different passwords — mật khẩu mạnh và khác nhau
- suspicious links — liên kết đáng ngờ
- check their bank statements regularly — kiểm tra sao kê ngân hàng thường xuyên
- shred documents — huỷ tài liệu bằng máy cắt
- appears to come from the bank — có vẻ đến từ ngân hàng
- give away passwords — tiết lộ mật khẩu
- limiting the information shared on social media — hạn chế thông tin chia sẻ trên mạng xã hội
- impersonate someone — mạo danh ai đó
- the first line of defence — tuyến phòng thủ đầu tiên
- data they do not control — dữ liệu họ không kiểm soát
- a single hack can expose millions of customers — một vụ tấn công có thể làm lộ hàng triệu khách hàng
- secure their systems — bảo mật hệ thống của họ
- pass laws — ban hành luật
- cooperate across borders — hợp tác xuyên biên giới
- international agreements — thoả thuận quốc tế
- trace criminals who operate from other countries — truy vết tội phạm hoạt động từ nước khác
- repairing their records — khôi phục hồ sơ của mình
- official leadership — sự dẫn dắt của chính quyền
- personal action — hành động cá nhân

#292 Discuss both views · 301 từ · AI 8.0

Some people believe that crime is mainly caused by poverty and lack of education. Others think criminals are personally responsible. Discuss both views and give your opinion.

When a crime shocks the public, people ask whether it is the result of social conditions or of a wrong choice, and opinions are divided as to whether crime is mainly caused by poverty and lack of education or whether criminals are personally responsible. This essay will consider both perspectives before explaining my own opinion.

On the one hand, those who blame social conditions argue that poverty and poor education raise the risk of crime. People with no job and no prospects face stronger temptation and fewer legitimate options, and schools in poor areas may fail to give children the skills they need. A teenager who leaves school with no qualifications and no job, for example, may be drawn by a gang that offers money and belonging. Studies often show that crime rates are higher in deprived districts, where unemployment, poor housing and family breakdown combine. From this point of view, improving schools and creating jobs would reduce crime more effectively than punishment.

On the other hand, supporters of personal responsibility point out that poverty does not excuse crime. Most poor people obey the law, and crime also occurs among the wealthy, for example in fraud and corruption. Every offender makes a choice, and treating criminals as victims of circumstance can weaken respect for the law and ignore the harm done to real victims. Courts should therefore hold people accountable for their actions. A person who steals when he could have asked for help, for instance, has made a decision that others in the same position avoided. Accountability also gives offenders the dignity of being treated as responsible adults.

In conclusion, both views have merit. Personally, I believe that social conditions raise the risk of crime, but individuals remain responsible for their choices, so both opportunity and accountability must be addressed.

Cụm cần nhớ

- a crime shocks the public — một vụ án gây sốc dư luận
- social conditions — điều kiện xã hội
- a wrong choice — một lựa chọn sai
- mainly caused by poverty and lack of education — chủ yếu do nghèo và thiếu giáo dục
- personally responsible — chịu trách nhiệm cá nhân
- raise the risk of crime — nâng rủi ro phạm tội
- stronger temptation and fewer legitimate options — cám dỗ mạnh hơn và ít lựa chọn hợp pháp hơn
- fail to give children the skills they need — không trang bị cho trẻ kỹ năng cần thiết
- leaves school with no qualifications — rời trường không có bằng cấp
- a gang that offers money and belonging — băng nhóm cho tiền và cảm giác thuộc về
- crime rates are higher in deprived districts — tỷ lệ tội phạm cao ở khu nghèo
- unemployment, poor housing and family breakdown — thất nghiệp, nhà ở tồi và gia đình tan vỡ
- more effectively than punishment — hiệu quả hơn trừng phạt
- supporters of personal responsibility — người ủng hộ trách nhiệm cá nhân
- does not excuse crime — không biện minh cho tội phạm
- Most poor people obey the law — đa số người nghèo tuân thủ luật
- fraud and corruption — gian lận và tham nhũng
- makes a choice — đưa ra lựa chọn
- victims of circumstance — nạn nhân của hoàn cảnh
- weaken respect for the law — làm yếu sự tôn trọng pháp luật
- hold people accountable for their actions — buộc người ta chịu trách nhiệm về hành động của mình

- responsible adults — người trưởng thành có trách nhiệm
- responsible — có trách nhiệm
- opportunity and accountability — cơ hội và trách nhiệm giải trình

#293 Discuss both views · 278 từ · AI 7.5

Some people prefer crime prevention measures while others prefer stricter punishments. Discuss both views and give your opinion.

When crime rises, governments face a choice between preventing it and punishing it, and some people prefer crime prevention measures while others prefer stricter punishments. This essay will consider both perspectives before explaining my own opinion.

On the one hand, supporters of prevention argue that stopping crime before it happens is cheaper and kinder than dealing with its consequences. Better street lighting, security cameras, youth programmes, drug treatment and job training reduce the opportunities and pressures that lead people to offend. A neighbourhood with a youth club and well-lit streets, for example, may see fewer incidents because young people have somewhere to go and offenders feel watched. Preventing a crime also saves the victim from suffering, and costs far less than arrests, trials and prison. Prevention can also strengthen communities, since residents who feel responsible for their area tend to look out for one another.

On the other hand, supporters of stricter punishment emphasise justice and protection. Offenders who harm others should be held accountable, and firm penalties show victims that society takes their suffering seriously. Long sentences keep dangerous people away from the public, and the prospect of a heavy penalty may deter some people from offending. Prevention is slow and uncertain, and people who have decided to commit a serious crime may not be influenced by programmes. A violent offender who is released early and attacks again, for instance, shows the cost of lenient treatment. Many citizens want to see visible consequences for wrongdoing.

In conclusion, both views have merit. Personally, I believe that prevention should receive greater emphasis because it is more effective in the long term, while proportionate punishment remains necessary for serious crimes.

Cụm cần nhớ

- crime prevention measures — biện pháp phòng ngừa tội phạm
- stricter punishments — hình phạt nghiêm khắc hơn
- stopping crime before it happens — ngăn tội phạm trước khi xảy ra
- cheaper and kinder — rẻ hơn và nhân văn hơn
- dealing with its consequences — xử lý hậu quả của nó
- Better street lighting, security cameras — đèn đường tốt hơn, camera an ninh
- youth programmes, drug treatment and job training — chương trình thanh niên, điều trị ma tuý và đào tạo nghề
- the opportunities and pressures that lead people to offend — cơ hội và áp lực khiến người ta phạm tội
- offenders feel watched — kẻ phạm tội cảm thấy bị theo dõi
- saves the victim from suffering — cứu nạn nhân khỏi đau khổ
- responsible — có trách nhiệm
- look out for one another — trông chừng lẫn nhau
- justice and protection — công lý và sự bảo vệ
- held accountable — bị buộc chịu trách nhiệm
- takes their suffering seriously — coi trọng nỗi đau của họ
- keep dangerous people away from the public — giữ người nguy hiểm xa công chúng
- the prospect of a heavy penalty — viễn cảnh về hình phạt nặng
- slow and uncertain — chậm và không chắc chắn
- released early and attacks again — được thả sớm và tấn công lần nữa
- lenient treatment — cách xử lý khoan dung
- proportionate punishment — hình phạt tương xứng

#305 Discuss both views · 296 từ · AI 8.0

Should individuals be responsible for upholding the law, or should society/government take primary responsibility? Discuss.

Laws work only when people obey them and when someone enforces them, and opinions differ on whether individuals should be responsible for upholding the law or whether society and government should take primary responsibility. This essay will consider both perspectives before explaining my own opinion.

On the one hand, supporters of individual responsibility argue that a law is only as strong as the willingness of citizens to follow it. Most laws are obeyed voluntarily, since people pay taxes, drive within limits and respect others' property without any officer watching them, and police could never monitor everyone all the time. Citizens who report crimes, serve on juries and refuse to take part in dishonest practices make the system work. A driver who stops at a red light on an empty road, for example, shows a respect for rules that no number of cameras could produce. A society in which people obey the law only from fear of punishment would be unstable and costly to run.

On the other hand, advocates of government responsibility point out that individuals cannot enforce laws themselves. Only the state can make fair laws, investigate crimes, bring suspects to court and punish offenders in a way that is lawful and consistent. Private individuals who take the law into their own hands risk violence, mistakes and revenge. Governments must also ensure that laws are clear, that police act fairly and that courts are independent, so that people trust the system and are willing to cooperate. An angry crowd that punishes a suspected thief, for instance, shows what can happen without proper institutions.

In conclusion, both views have merit. Overall, I believe that governments should take primary responsibility for making and enforcing laws, while individuals support them by obeying them and cooperating with the authorities.

Cụm cần nhớ

- Laws work only when people obey them — luật chỉ hiệu quả khi người ta tuân thủ
- responsible — có trách nhiệm
- upholding the law — giữ gìn luật pháp
- take primary responsibility — chịu trách nhiệm chính
- supporters of individual responsibility — người ủng hộ trách nhiệm cá nhân
- as strong as the willingness of citizens — mạnh bằng sự sẵn lòng của công dân
- obeyed voluntarily — được tuân thủ tự nguyện
- respect others' property — tôn trọng tài sản người khác
- monitor everyone all the time — giám sát mọi người mọi lúc
- report crimes, serve on juries — báo tội phạm, làm bồi thẩm đoàn
- a red light on an empty road — đèn đỏ trên con đường vắng
- from fear of punishment — vì sợ bị phạt
- unstable and costly to run — bất ổn và tốn kém để vận hành
- enforce laws themselves — tự thực thi luật
- investigate crimes, bring suspects to court — điều tra tội phạm, đưa nghi phạm ra toà
- lawful and consistent — hợp pháp và nhất quán
- take the law into their own hands — tự tay thực thi pháp luật
- courts are independent — toà án độc lập
- trust the system — tin vào hệ thống
- an angry crowd — đám đông giận dữ

#334 Discuss both views · 285 từ · AI 7.5

Should individuals be responsible for reporting wrongdoing, or should society/government enforce it? Discuss.

Fraud, abuse and dangerous practices often continue because those who know about them stay silent, and opinions differ on whether individuals should be responsible for reporting wrongdoing or whether society and government should enforce it. This essay will consider both perspectives before explaining my own opinion.

On the one hand, supporters of individual reporting argue that people inside an organisation often know about wrongdoing before anyone else. Colleagues see fraud, abuse or unsafe practices first, and an authority that has no information cannot act. An accountant who notices false invoices at her firm, for example, may be the only person who can stop the crime. A culture in which people speak up also discourages misconduct, since offenders know that others are watching. Many scandals, from unsafe food factories to financial fraud, were exposed by employees who refused to look away, and society owes them respect.

On the other hand, advocates of enforcement by government point out that reporting is risky for the individual. Fear of losing a job, being bullied or being punished stops many people from speaking, and those who do report sometimes suffer for years. It is also unfair to expect ordinary people to do the work of investigators, who have training and legal powers. Governments can set up independent agencies that inspect workplaces and audit organisations without waiting for complaints, and pass laws that protect whistleblowers and punish those who retaliate. Safe hotlines and legal advice make it easier to come forward.

In conclusion, both views have merit. Overall, I believe that governments should take the main responsibility by enforcing the law and protecting those who report, while individuals should be encouraged to speak up when it is safe to do so.

Cụm cần nhớ

- Fraud, abuse and dangerous practices — gian lận, lạm dụng và thực hành nguy hiểm
- stay silent — giữ im lặng
- responsible — có trách nhiệm
- reporting wrongdoing — báo cáo sai phạm
- supporters of individual reporting — người ủng hộ việc cá nhân báo cáo
- inside an organisation — bên trong một tổ chức
- know about wrongdoing before anyone else — biết sai phạm trước bất kỳ ai
- unsafe practices — thực hành không an toàn
- an authority that has no information cannot act — cơ quan không có thông tin thì không thể hành động
- false invoices — hoá đơn giả
- stop the crime — chặn tội phạm
- speak up — lên tiếng
- discourages misconduct — ngăn hành vi sai trái
- refused to look away — từ chối nhắm mắt làm ngơ
- advocates of enforcement — người ủng hộ thực thi nghiêm
- reporting is risky — báo cáo là rủi ro
- losing a job, being bullied or being punished — mất việc, bị bắt nạt hoặc bị trừng phạt
- suffer for years — chịu đựng nhiều năm
- independent agencies — cơ quan độc lập
- audit organisations — kiểm toán các tổ chức
- pass laws — ban hành luật
- protect whistleblowers and punish those who retaliate — bảo vệ người tố giác và phạt người trả đũa
- Safe hotlines and legal advice — đường dây nóng an toàn và tư vấn pháp lý
- come forward — đứng ra trình báo

#454 Discuss both views · 286 từ · AI 7.5

Should individuals be responsible for reporting corruption, or should society/government ensure transparency? Discuss.

Corruption wastes public money, damages trust and holds back development, and opinions differ on whether individuals should be responsible for reporting it or whether society and government should ensure transparency. This essay will consider both perspectives before explaining my own opinion.

On the one hand, supporters of individual reporting argue that people who witness corruption have a duty to speak. Officials and employees often see bribes, false invoices or favouritism long before outsiders do, and a society where such behaviour is tolerated will never change. An accountant who notices false invoices at her firm, for example, may be the only person who can stop the crime. When citizens refuse to pay bribes and report those who demand them, corruption becomes riskier, and a culture of honesty can spread. Journalists and activists who expose corruption have often made reforms possible.

On the other hand, advocates of government transparency point out that reporting is dangerous and cannot be the main defence. People who report powerful officials may lose their jobs, face threats or be ignored if the same corrupt system receives their complaint. Governments must make public spending transparent. Open contracts, published budgets, independent audits and a free press make it harder to hide corruption, and independent agencies can investigate without fear of the people they examine. A city that publishes every building contract online, for example, allows journalists and citizens to spot suspicious prices. Laws that protect whistleblowers and punish retaliation are also essential.

In conclusion, both views have merit. Overall, I believe that governments must take the lead by ensuring transparency and independent investigation, while citizens support them by refusing to take part in corruption and by reporting it when it is safe to do so.

Cụm cần nhớ

- Corruption wastes public money — tham nhũng lãng phí tiền công
- damages trust and holds back development — làm hỏng niềm tin và kìm hãm phát triển
- responsible — có trách nhiệm
- reporting it — báo cáo nó
- ensure transparency — đảm bảo tính minh bạch
- supporters of individual reporting — người ủng hộ việc cá nhân báo cáo
- witness corruption — chứng kiến tham nhũng
- a duty to speak — nghĩa vụ lên tiếng
- bribes, false invoices or favouritism — hối lộ, hoá đơn giả hoặc thiên vị
- a society where such behaviour is tolerated — một xã hội dung thứ hành vi như vậy
- false invoices — hoá đơn giả
- stop the crime — chặn tội phạm
- refuse to pay bribes — từ chối đưa hối lộ
- a culture of honesty — văn hoá trung thực
- made reforms possible — giúp cải cách khả thi
- face threats — đối mặt đe doạ
- the same corrupt system — chính hệ thống tham nhũng đó
- Open contracts, published budgets, independent audits — hợp đồng công khai, ngân sách được công bố, kiểm toán độc lập
- a free press — báo chí tự do
- hide corruption — che giấu tham nhũng
- independent agencies — cơ quan độc lập
- investigate without fear — điều tra không sợ hãi
- suspicious prices — giá đáng ngờ
- punish retaliation — trừng phạt hành vi trả đũa
- take the lead — đi đầu

Agree / Disagree

#175 Agree / Disagree · 281 từ · AI 7.5

Some believe that the death penalty deters crime. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

In some countries the state may execute people convicted of the most serious crimes, and some believe that the death penalty deters crime. I disagree with this view, since there is no clear evidence that it works better than long imprisonment, and the risks of the punishment are very high.

To begin with, there is no clear evidence that the death penalty deters crime better than long imprisonment. Many serious crimes are committed in anger or without expecting capture, so offenders do not weigh the penalty at all. Comparisons between regions with and without the death penalty have not shown consistently lower murder rates in the places that execute criminals. Terrorists and organised criminals may even welcome martyrdom. What deters most offenders is the fear of being caught, not the exact punishment that follows. In practice, the death penalty is also rarely applied, which weakens any threat that it might carry.

Furthermore, the punishment is irreversible. Courts sometimes make mistakes, and a man who is executed and later proved innocent, for example, cannot be given back his life. Evidence suggests that poor defendants and members of minority groups are more likely to be sentenced to death, which raises serious concerns about fairness. Many people also believe that the state should not take life, and the costs of lengthy appeals can exceed those of life imprisonment. Supporters argue that the death penalty gives justice to victims and permanently protects society. However, life imprisonment without release also protects the public, while allowing mistakes to be corrected.

In conclusion, I disagree that the death penalty deters crime, because the evidence is weak and the risk of executing the innocent is too serious to accept.

Cụm cần nhớ

- convicted of the most serious crimes — bị kết án tội nghiêm trọng nhất
- the death penalty deters crime — án tử hình răn đe tội phạm
- no clear evidence — không có bằng chứng rõ ràng
- long imprisonment — tù dài hạn
- committed in anger — gây ra khi tức giận
- without expecting capture — không nghĩ bị bắt
- weigh the penalty — cân nhắc hình phạt
- regions with and without the death penalty — vùng có và không có án tử hình
- murder rates — tỷ lệ giết người
- welcome martyrdom — đón nhận cái chết vì lý tưởng
- the fear of being caught — nỗi sợ bị bắt
- rarely applied — hiếm khi được áp dụng
- irreversible — không thể đảo ngược
- make mistakes — phạm sai lầm
- proved innocent — được chứng minh vô tội
- given back his life — được trả lại mạng sống
- poor defendants and members of minority groups — bị cáo nghèo và thành viên nhóm thiểu số
- raises serious concerns about fairness — gây lo ngại nghiêm trọng về sự công bằng
- lengthy appeals — kháng cáo kéo dài
- permanently protects society — bảo vệ xã hội vĩnh viễn
- the evidence is weak — bằng chứng yếu

#181 Agree / Disagree · 286 từ · AI 7.5

Some people say that video games promote violence. Do you agree or disagree?

After every violent incident involving young people, someone blames video games, and some people say that they promote violence. I disagree with this view, since the evidence that games cause real violence is weak, and other factors matter far more.

To begin with, evidence that video games cause real violence is weak. Hundreds of millions of people play violent games without harming anyone, and violent crime has fallen in several countries as gaming has grown. A teenager who plays a shooting game with friends in the evening, for example, usually treats it as entertainment, as he would a film. Large studies have found, at most, small and short-lived increases in aggression after playing, comparable to those after watching a competitive sport. Most players understand that what happens on a screen is fiction and have no wish to copy it, and many games involve cooperation, planning and creativity.

Furthermore, real violence has far more serious causes. Family background, poverty, abuse, mental illness, drug use and access to weapons are much stronger predictors, and blaming games distracts attention from these problems. When a violent offender happens to play games, this reflects how common games are among young people, not that they caused the crime. However, games are not harmless for everyone. Very young children should not play adult games, extreme content may disturb vulnerable players, and long hours of play can affect sleep and school work. Parents should check age ratings, set time limits and talk to children about what they play. These practical steps are more effective than blaming the medium.

In conclusion, I disagree that video games promote violence, because the evidence is weak and other factors matter more, though sensible limits for children are wise.

Cụm cần nhớ

- violent incident involving young people — vụ bạo lực liên quan người trẻ
- Hundreds of millions of people — hàng trăm triệu người
- play violent games without harming anyone — chơi game bạo lực mà không hại ai
- violent crime has fallen — tội phạm bạo lực đã giảm
- a shooting game — trò chơi bắn súng
- treats it as entertainment — coi đó là giải trí
- small and short-lived increases in aggression — tăng hung hăng nhỏ và ngắn ngủi
- comparable to those after watching a competitive sport — tương đương sau khi xem thể thao đối kháng
- cooperation, planning and creativity — hợp tác, lập kế hoạch và sáng tạo
- far more serious causes — nguyên nhân nghiêm trọng hơn nhiều
- Family background, poverty, abuse — bối cảnh gia đình, nghèo, bị lạm dụng
- mental illness, drug use and access to weapons — bệnh tâm thần, dùng ma tuý và tiếp cận vũ khí
- stronger predictors — yếu tố dự báo mạnh hơn
- distracts attention from these problems — làm xao nhãng khỏi những vấn đề này
- vulnerable players — người chơi dễ tổn thương
- check age ratings, set time limits — kiểm tra phân loại độ tuổi, đặt giới hạn thời gian
- video games promote violence — trò chơi điện tử khuyến khích bạo lực
- the evidence is weak — bằng chứng yếu
- sensible limits for children — giới hạn hợp lý cho trẻ em

#323 Agree / Disagree · 311 từ · AI 8.0

Some people say that physical punishment by parents should be illegal. Do you agree or disagree?

Many parents were smacked as children and still believe that a light slap is a normal part of discipline, but some people say that physical punishment by parents should be illegal. I agree with this view, since hitting children harms them and teaches that violence solves problems, although the law should focus on support rather than punishment.

To begin with, hitting children harms them and teaches them that violence solves problems. Physical punishment can cause injury, fear and anxiety, and children who are hit are more likely to be aggressive, whereas calm explanation and consistent consequences teach self-control. A child who is smacked for shouting, for example, may learn that adults solve problems by hitting, and may copy that behaviour at school. Research in many countries has linked physical punishment with poorer mental health and behaviour problems, and it can damage the trust between parent and child. There is no evidence that it works better than other methods.

Furthermore, children should have the same protection from assault as adults. It is illegal to hit another adult, and it is hard to justify why a smaller and more vulnerable person should receive less protection. Many countries, including Sweden and New Zealand, have banned physical punishment and have found that attitudes changed without large numbers of prosecutions. However, a ban is hard to enforce in the privacy of the home. Many parents who slap a child are stressed rather than cruel, and prosecuting them may harm the family further. The law should therefore set a clear standard while concentrating on parenting classes, advice and support, with prosecution reserved for serious cases. Alternatives such as time-outs and rewards can replace smacking.

In conclusion, I agree that physical punishment by parents should be illegal, because it harms children and sets a poor example, provided that the law is used mainly to educate and support families.

Cụm cần nhớ

- a light slap — cái tát nhẹ
- a normal part of discipline — một phần bình thường của kỷ luật
- physical punishment by parents — trừng phạt thể xác của cha mẹ
- hitting children harms them — đánh trẻ gây hại cho chúng
- teaches them that violence solves problems — dạy chúng rằng bạo lực giải quyết vấn đề
- injury, fear and anxiety — chấn thương, sợ hãi và lo âu
- more likely to be aggressive — dễ hung hăng hơn
- calm explanation and consistent consequences — giải thích bình tĩnh và hệ quả nhất quán
- teach self-control — dạy tính tự chủ
- solve problems — giải quyết vấn đề
- copy that behaviour at school — bắt chước hành vi đó ở trường
- poorer mental health and behaviour problems — sức khoẻ tâm thần kém và vấn đề hành vi
- damage the trust between parent and child — làm hỏng niềm tin giữa cha mẹ và con
- the same protection from assault as adults — sự bảo vệ khỏi hành hung như người lớn
- a smaller and more vulnerable person — người nhỏ bé và dễ tổn thương hơn
- attitudes changed — thái độ đã thay đổi
- hard to enforce in the privacy of the home — khó thực thi trong sự riêng tư của gia đình
- stressed rather than cruel — căng thẳng chứ không tàn nhẫn
- prosecuting them — truy tố họ
- parenting classes, advice and support — lớp làm cha mẹ, lời khuyên và hỗ trợ
- time-outs and rewards — cho nghỉ và phần thưởng

Opinion

#358 Opinion · 289 từ · AI 7.5

Discuss how community policing impacts public safety.

In many cities, police officers spend most of their time in cars, responding to emergency calls, but some forces now assign officers to walk the same streets and talk to residents. This essay will explain two key ways in which community policing affects public safety: by building trust and information, and by preventing crime before it happens.

First and foremost, community policing builds trust between officers and residents. Officers who walk the same streets, meet shopkeepers and talk to young people learn about local problems early, and residents who trust them are more willing to share information. An officer who walks the same neighbourhood every day, for example, may learn about a bullying problem from a shopkeeper before it becomes serious. Trust also encourages victims and witnesses, who may otherwise be afraid, to come forward. In communities that have been suspicious of the police, regular friendly contact can repair relations that were damaged by past incidents.

In addition, community policing helps to prevent crime. Officers who know the area can recognise unusual behaviour, work with schools and youth groups, and deal with small problems such as graffiti and vandalism that can otherwise create an atmosphere in which more serious crimes occur. Residents who feel safer go out more, which makes streets livelier and discourages offenders. However, it has limits. It needs more officers and training, and it may not suit emergencies or large areas. If officers are moved too often, relationships do not form. It also works best when communities are involved in decisions, not simply informed.

To sum up, community policing improves public safety by building trust and by helping to prevent crime, provided that it is properly staffed and supported. For these reasons, it deserves continued investment.

Cụm cần nhớ

- responding to emergency calls — đáp ứng các cuộc gọi khẩn cấp
- walk the same streets — đi bộ cùng các con phố
- community policing — cảnh sát cộng đồng
- public safety — an ninh công cộng
- building trust and information — xây dựng niềm tin và thông tin
- preventing crime before it happens — ngăn tội phạm trước khi xảy ra
- builds trust between officers and residents — xây dựng niềm tin giữa sĩ quan và cư dân
- meet shopkeepers — gặp chủ cửa hàng
- learn about local problems early — biết vấn đề địa phương sớm
- willing to share information — sẵn lòng chia sẻ thông tin
- a bullying problem — vấn đề bắt nạt
- victims and witnesses — nạn nhân và nhân chứng
- come forward — đứng ra trình báo
- repair relations that were damaged — sửa chữa quan hệ bị tổn hại
- recognise unusual behaviour — nhận ra hành vi bất thường
- graffiti and vandalism — vẽ bậy và phá hoại
- create an atmosphere — tạo ra bầu không khí
- feel safer — cảm thấy an toàn hơn
- has limits — có giới hạn
- more officers and training — thêm sĩ quan và đào tạo
- moved too often — bị điều chuyển quá thường xuyên
- involved in decisions — được tham gia vào quyết định

#365 Opinion · 299 từ · AI 8.0

Discuss the role of youth clubs in preventing crime.

Many offences by young people happen in the late afternoon and evening, when school is over and parents are still at work, and youth clubs try to fill this gap. This essay will explain two key ways in which youth clubs help to prevent crime: by offering safe places and positive activities, and by building skills and relationships.

First and foremost, youth clubs give young people safe places, positive activities and role models. Sport, music and mentoring fill the unsupervised hours when many offences occur, and give young people a sense of belonging that gangs might otherwise provide. A youth club that opens until ten at night, for example, gives teenagers somewhere to go instead of wandering the streets. Because they are busy and supervised, young people have fewer opportunities and less boredom, which is a common reason for vandalism and petty theft. Adults who run the clubs also notice early signs of trouble at home or school and can offer help.

In addition, youth clubs build skills and relationships that reduce the pull of crime. Team games teach cooperation and self-control, workshops teach practical skills such as cooking, music or computing, and mentors show that there are alternatives to violence. Young people who feel valued and who have friends outside gangs are less likely to take risks. However, clubs reduce crime only if they reach those most at risk and are properly funded. Some teenagers stay away, and clubs that are poorly run or underfunded may close, which disappoints the young people who rely on them. Clubs must therefore be free or cheap, welcoming and led by well-trained, reliable staff.

To sum up, youth clubs can help to prevent crime by providing safe activities and by building skills and positive relationships. For these reasons, they deserve sustained funding.

Cụm cần nhớ

- offences by young people — vụ phạm pháp của người trẻ
- school is over and parents are still at work — tan học và cha mẹ vẫn đang đi làm
- youth clubs — câu lạc bộ thanh niên
- help to prevent crime — giúp ngăn tội phạm
- safe places and positive activities — nơi an toàn và hoạt động tích cực
- building skills and relationships — xây dựng kỹ năng và quan hệ
- safe places, positive activities and role models — nơi an toàn, hoạt động tích cực và hình mẫu
- fill the unsupervised hours — lấp những giờ không có người giám sát
- a sense of belonging that gangs might otherwise provide — cảm giác thuộc về mà băng nhóm lẽ ra mang lại
- wandering the streets — lang thang ngoài phố
- busy and supervised — bận rộn và có người giám sát
- vandalism and petty theft — phá hoại và trộm vặt
- early signs of trouble at home or school — dấu hiệu sớm của rắc rối ở nhà hoặc trường
- cooperation and self-control — hợp tác và tự chủ
- practical skills — kỹ năng thực tế
- alternatives to violence — lựa chọn thay thế cho bạo lực
- feel valued — cảm thấy được trân trọng
- take risks — liều lĩnh
- reach those most at risk — tiếp cận những người có nguy cơ cao nhất
- properly funded — được tài trợ đầy đủ

#491 Opinion · 301 từ · AI 8.0

In your opinion, should countries invest more in law enforcement and the legal system? Explain why.

Safe streets, honest dealings and fair trials depend on police, courts and prisons that work well, and in my opinion countries should invest more in law enforcement and the legal system. I believe this because a well-funded system catches more offenders and delivers justice faster, and because it protects citizens and economic activity.

To begin with, a well-funded law enforcement system catches more offenders and delivers justice faster. Trained detectives, modern forensic technology and enough judges reduce backlogs, so that victims see results and offenders expect to be caught. A victim who must wait three years for a trial, for example, may lose faith in the justice system, while a suspect who is held for months without a hearing suffers an injustice of his own. Investment in training also raises standards of fairness and reduces wrongful convictions, and well-paid officers are less open to bribery. Technology such as DNA testing and digital forensics makes it possible to solve crimes that once went unpunished.

Furthermore, an effective justice system supports economic and social life. Businesses invest where contracts are enforced and property is protected, and citizens who feel safe are more willing to work, trade and take part in community life. Courts that resolve disputes quickly save time and money for ordinary people, and legal aid ensures that poorer citizens are not denied justice. However, investment should be balanced with prevention and fair treatment. Spending only on arrests and prisons will not solve the root causes of crime, and a system that is not accountable can abuse its power. Money should therefore be spent wisely, alongside programmes for education, jobs and rehabilitation.

In conclusion, I believe that countries should invest more in law enforcement and the legal system, because it delivers safety and fairness, provided that spending is balanced and carefully supervised.

Cụm cần nhớ

- Safe streets, honest dealings and fair trials — đường phố an toàn, giao dịch trung thực và xét xử công bằng
- invest more in law enforcement and the legal system — đầu tư nhiều hơn vào thực thi pháp luật và hệ thống pháp lý
- catches more offenders and delivers justice faster — bắt nhiều kẻ phạm tội hơn và thực thi công lý nhanh hơn
- protects citizens and economic activity — bảo vệ công dân và hoạt động kinh tế
- Trained detectives — thám tử được đào tạo
- modern forensic technology — công nghệ pháp y hiện đại
- reduce backlogs — giảm tồn đọng
- victims see results — nạn nhân thấy kết quả
- offenders expect to be caught — kẻ phạm tội kỳ vọng sẽ bị bắt
- lose faith in the justice system — mất niềm tin vào hệ thống tư pháp
- held for months without a hearing — bị giam hàng tháng không có phiên toà
- reduces wrongful convictions — giảm kết án oan
- open to bribery — dễ bị hối lộ
- DNA testing and digital forensics — xét nghiệm DNA và pháp y kỹ thuật số
- went unpunished — không bị trừng phạt
- contracts are enforced and property is protected — hợp đồng được thực thi và tài sản được bảo vệ
- take part in community life — tham gia đời sống cộng đồng
- resolve disputes quickly — giải quyết tranh chấp nhanh
- legal aid — trợ giúp pháp lý
- the root causes of crime — nguyên nhân gốc rễ của tội phạm
- abuse its power — lạm dụng quyền lực